

DINING, GUIDES, HAPPY HOUR, LIFESTYLE

Unconventional Wi-Fi Spots to Make Working Remotely Way More Enjoyable

BY ASHLEY VILLARREAL ON AUG 29, 2017

Working from home can inevitably start to feel like going to the same office every day, but it doesn't have to.

We've searched out some noteworthy spots around the city that are perfect for a workday field trip or maybe even a more permanent cafe hiatus. Here are some less traditional spots to get on the Wi-Fi, get some work done and still enjoy a change of scenery while you're at it.

Teahouse at The Center SF (Hayes Valley)

POPULAR NEWS

Hardly Strictly Bluegrass Brings Back Music Medleys for Lineup Announcement

SF Welcomes Back Its First Large-scale Comic Convention in Five Years

7 San Francisco Restaurants to Finally Try While Everyone's at Burning Man

Museum of Ice Cream's San Francisco Debut and How To Get Tickets

The 10 Greatest Chefs of All Time

name basis with the barista because you've been ordering the same turkey panini since March, then maybe it's time for a change and a few new menu items.

SoMa StrEat Food Park, 428 11th Street

Instead of chasing your favorite food trucks around the city, you can post up here for lunch and work at any of the communal wooden benches around this permanent foodie haven. Or find a quieter spot at one of the tables inside a kitschy remodeled school bus.

Steep Brew @ Whole Foods Market 450 Rhode Island Street

You can grab a beer at this Whole Foods Market outpost and unpack your lunch (store bought, of course) while you pound away at your keyboard. Another plus: you can cut down on your commute and grab groceries here once you've had it for the day.

The Inspired Worker

It's nice to switch things up now and again and draw inspiration from your surroundings.

The de Young Museum, 50 Hagiwara Tea Garden Drive, Golden Gate Park

There's nothing like traveling to a remote art museum smack dab in the center of the Golden Gate Park's rolling hills and redwoods to get into that work flow. What makes this place special is the Barbro-Sachs Osher Sculpture Garden and outdoor patio. You don't have to pay the entrance fee to go into

8 Incredibly Instagrammable San Francisco Bars

10 Stunning Road Trips for Nature Lovers (Totally Worth the Drive)

5 Impressive San Francisco Restaurants to Take that Special Someone

The Nomadic Worker

Not everyone thrives in your typical work environment, powered by caffeinated beverages and the warbled sounds of Iron & Wine oozing out of the speakers. Here are some quiet spots with plenty of fresh air.

Yerba Buena Gardens, 750 Howard Street, SoMa

With over 30 public parks and open spaces with WiFi across the city, this is arguably one of the best spots just outside downtown to snag a grassy knoll and disappear behind your laptop. When (and if) you need a respite from nature, you can hit the cozy Samovar Tea House, just above the Martin Luther King Memorial.

Sansome Rooftop Deck, 343 Sansome Street, Financial District

One of the best kept secret rooftop gardens we've gone and blown up now—sorry, deck vets—but it's time. This partially-shaded 15th-floor deck is complete with a sundial sculpture and epic views of the Transamerica Pyramid and surrounding downtown areas. Just remember to never abuse those privileges.

The Meditative Worker

What's great about these Wi-Fi locations are that they're most definitely day-changing and mood-lifting.

The Interval @ The Long Now Foundation, 2 Marina Boulevard, Building A, Fort Mason Center

If you haven't heard of the Long Now Foundation yet, you'd better get on it. This acclaimed bar sits inside a refreshingly bright space with floor-to-ceiling bookshelves, a clock meant to last 10,000 years, and a library of books you might need to rebuild civilization in the event of an apocalypse.

The Center, 548 Fillmore Street, Hayes Valley

Enjoy a high-chamber pot of steeped herbs while working in this zen space. It's a mixed vibe here: part Bohemian meditation lounge, part Victorian log cabin. This space also offers monthly membership options and a rotating calendar of events, including meditation and yoga.

The Multitasking Worker

...to find a spot that offers us a little bit of sidewalk entertainment when neighborhood has vendors, bars, a VR cube and quite a few arcade machines to help you reset.

What's great about these Wi-Fi locations are that they're mostly free and definitely day-changing.

Follow @sfstation

Family-Style Establishment Buca Di Beppo Closes its SoMa Location

RELATED NEWS

Where to Find the 20 Best Farmers' Markets in San

Best Lunches in San Francisco: Financial District

San Francisco's Best Lunches: SoMa

The Nature Fix: 10 Off-the-Grid Wilderness Camping

Life's a Beach: 10 Easy Yet Amazing Camping Getaways by

End of an Era: 'Terminus' Party Celebrating the Artist

Best Places to Watch Super Bowl 50 in the SF Bay Area

5 Epic BARTable Staycation Giveaways: First Up, Downtown

LEAVE A COMMENT

Make sure you fill in all mandatory fields.

Comment

Name *

Email *

Website

I'm not a robot

reCAPTCHA
Privacy - Terms